

El Salvador Program

~ Giving children the hope for a stronger future ~

The El Salvador program works to remove barriers that are preventing children from obtaining an Education by improving access to educational facilities and the participation in school. This is a program that will reduce poverty by preparing children for the opportunity to competitively seek employment, by teaching their families about balanced nutrition, clean water use and the environment, by providing access to health care and by developing their problem solving skills. The program will result in less child mortality, less dependency on foreign aid and less use of country medical systems. Although the program has not formally incorporated children's rights into the program activities, it does focus on assisting children to gain access to school. The program will increase human dignity as well as give hope for positive improvement in the future for these communities.

The El Salvador program will provide Nutritional and health support. It will assist in the establishment of legal identity for the children in the program. This will allow children to receive a birth certificate and other forms of identification. Through this approach the El Salvador program will begin to break down the many barriers for accessing the educational system.

The inability for many children to enter school often leads to:

- Increased poverty from lack of employment opportunities
- Perpetuation of family poverty that results in poor health, early death and lack of nutritional knowledge
- Unavailable legal identity documents results in a lack of access to school and future life in the informal society
- Shortage of funds towards medical programs, the unemployed often have poor health and a low mortality rate.

Where there is an absence of available space for learning, the program will undertake the construction of a new school facility or renovate an existing school structure. This will provide more spaces for students in a safer, healthier environment as well as potentially providing a night school for adults.
